be surprising.

However that may be, I desire to present an outline of what seems to be the best system for our city:

First. The city should be divided into

First. The city should be divided into some nine or ten primary school districts, in each of which a single female teacher, should have charge of some 50 pupils of the lowest grade, say from six to eight years of age. Of these districts, at least one should be upon the Island. The First Ward has now really two primary schools; the 5th has doubtless primary schools; the 5th has doubtless primary schools second for has doubtless primary scholars enough for

2nd. There should be about three Gram-mar School Districts, each embracing three or four of the former. In each of these should be a Grammer School to which, at stated times, pupils should be admitted from the Primary Schools or elsewhere, on exami-nation as to their attainments, and in which should be taught all the common branches of education to a certain fixed extent. 3rd. To crown the whole; to give characfor the whole system: to promote the efficiency of all the schools, by giving each school its proper grade of pupils and stimulating both teachers and pupils to put forth their best efforts, there should be a central High School, to which pupils from the whole city might be admited once a year on rivid examination. In this should reconstitute the state of the school of the should reconstitute the should reconst ive us better schools for the same money No doubt every person who holds that or-dinary schools are infinitely better than none, will agree that excellent schools are worth at least twice as much as simply good ones. If we now have any schools deserving the name of excellent (as I hope we have several.) It is not because the pre-sent system has made them pacessarily so mt system has made them necessarIly so and even they would be far more efficient under a better system. One word more. Since an immediate re-sult of the adoption of the above system would doubtless be the reducing of the number of male teachers, and a bar to the raising of the salaries of those that would remain, no one can attribute selfish considemain, no one can according it, to A TRACHUB.

great destruction of Government stores as well as private; and such a destruction has scarcely been since the commencement of the war, amounting doubtless to three hundred thousand dollars. The loss of private stores was considerable. My own was one that suffered from the plundering hand of traitors. Permit me to give you a short history of this affair in addition to what you have already had.

Some three days before the attachment.

Some three days before the attack was made, we had evidence from such men as Dr. Gibson that should have been relied on, that Jenkins with some 1200 cavalry was seen three miles above Huttonsville, in Randolph county, and finding that they could not pass Beverly verysafely they took a tack round by the head of Elk Water and across on the head waters of the Little to those whose acts I know something about. And I must say in justice that Col.

Harris done his whole duty. I was known to many of his plans for our defeuce, and had he been permitted to have carried them out all would have been safe. But no, he was left in a manuer without any force, only Captain Marsh's company and our new company, the Battery, hows, commanded by Captain Mose. and our new company, the Battery boys, commanded by Captain Moore.
But never did men fight better. Capt. Marsh and Capt. Moore deserve much credit for their brave defense, but they were completely overpowered. Even had there been another such company we would have whipped them to death, and not withstanding our small pumpher the sech would have whipped them to death, and so the purposes," approved May twented the same are hereby transferred to twelve or fifteen wounded, whilst ours was in only eight wounded—two of whom have since died, and another probably may.—I After our men were wholly overpowered the rebels came rushing into town more like demons than men. Plundering and rapine seemed to be their game. They stole every good horse they could get their hands on wherever they went, and yet they call themselves the Souther chivalry—the regulars of the army. If they be, God save us Every measure which results in the improvement of our public schools is of value to the citizens and to the State which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. In this view, the recent action of our school commissioners as advertised in yesterday morning's paper, is matter of rejolcing to every philanthropist and to every patrict. Permit me, however, without knowing the wishes of the people on the Island, to suggest that it is hardly to be expected that they should concur in the proposed measure, so far as "excluding the 6th Ward" is concerned. That a considerable portion of the city should consent to forego all the advantages of graded schools, which under a judicious system they might enjoy, such as a such provided the such graded with such guns as we could get, and stood in defense of the place until the patric was an even when the such guns as we could get, and stood in defense of the place until the active which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.
